Arabia is mostly a desert, so hot that it is impossible to walk over it bare-footed during the day. Occasionally, however, one comes across a fertile patch, an oasis, with deep spring, tall, graceful, shadowy fig and palm trees on its banks and green grass growing all around it. The Arabs are nomads. They live in portable tents and eat figs and dates. They also preserve dates. Arabian horses are the best in the world. The Arabs deeply love their horses and never treat them as beasts of burden. In fact it is the camel, rightly called the ship of the desert that is used to carry goods.

- i. Describe an oasis.

Sports can be used for both purposes, good and evil. If used well, sports can teach endurance, courage, cooperation, fair play, a healthy respect for rules and the quality of putting group interest over one's own personal interest. If used badly, they breed undesirable vanity and rivalry, thus sports can be used either to promote warlike tendencies or inculcate the value of peace and cooperation. In dictatorial countries sports are being used for the former
